

Medication Management and the Home Health Therapist

Sorting Out the Confusion

Thursday August 27, 2009
2:00 PM - 3:30 PM Eastern

This is a Training You Can't Afford to Miss!

With the increase in home health episodes that involve therapy cases, the need for therapists involvement in medication management becomes increasingly important. Still, the therapist's role in this area remains unclear. Who is ultimately responsible for medication review? And, even more importantly, where do the boundaries lie?

Medication Management is an issue that continues to cause anxiety and concern for many home care therapists. A common misconception is that these issues only surround the comprehensive assessment completed at the start of an episode and don't involve the therapist. However, the focus on patient safety has expanded the need for the entire health care team entering the home to be involved.

This detailed 90 minute webinar session will outline the regulations surrounding the medication regimen review specific to home care and how therapists and nurses can work together to better streamline that process.

Training Objectives

- Explore the regulations that define medication regimen review.
- Define the roles and responsibilities of therapists in medication management .
- Examine the documentation components that should be utilized when documenting medication management issues.
- Learn to incorporate medication management strategies into routine care planning.
- Get important updates on the proposed OASIS C and medications.

It is expected that OASIS C will include a much greater focus on Medication Management. Preparation is key.

Presented by A National Leader in Home Care
